Calculate the hash values for multiple files at the same time, supporting a large number of file types Compatible with Windows XP/Vista/7/8Biggest Little City Winner Declared The two candidates vying for the borough presidency in San Francisco have been told that they have been selected as the Biggest Little City Winner. On Monday, the membership of the Police Officers Association went to the San Francisco Field Division Office and picked Rick Colwell as the winner, declaring that he would be the official pick and casting his votes for the Republican. From the San Francisco Chronicle: "We are calling on Carl DeMaio and Peter Pan for debate on radio station KRON," said Colwell, the union president. "We also invite Carl and Peter to come to the police station at 29th and Folsom, where we are meeting to formally announce the winner." In Colwell's three-plus months in San Francisco, he has staged a small but sizable list of media appearances, including three times on KRON, a radio station in San Francisco where he's had his own public-access talk show. Colwell was a police officer with the O'Keefe Township Police Department and was elected the top cop in the area, for six years. He was responsible for the township's drug lab and K-9 unit, and once caught more than a pound of heroin. He also helped lead a measure to increase the minimum wage for police officers to $45,000 and served on the San Francisco Civil Service Board. DeMaio, who has been in the Bay Area for two decades and has run for Congress as the Republican candidate for a House seat that is now vacant, was quick to distance himself from Colwell's campaign. "Carl has many friends in San Francisco, but he's not one of them," DeMaio said. "I'm very much looking forward to serving the district." On Monday, San Francisco Police Officers Association members not only made Colwell the winner, they gave him the "Biggest Little City" award. "I feel like I'm going to step into this and do great things, and I feel like I'm ready to give my opinion on things," Colwell said. "I'm not new to San
