The conventional photographing optical lens assembly used for the camera of the portable electronic products usually has five lens elements, i.e. a positive optical system, a stop, a negative optical system, a stop and a positive optical system. However, it is hard to obtain good image quality since the number of the lens elements is large. Furthermore, it is very difficult to mass-produce the photographing optical lens assembly due to the complexity of the structure thereof. When the number of the lens elements increases, the system aberrations are hard to be corrected, and it is impossible to adjust the chromatic aberration of the optical system. In addition, the total track length of the optical system cannot be short enough for the optical instrument to be miniaturized. Therefore, a new optical system is required to overcome the drawbacks in the conventional optical system.A molecular dynamics study of the surface flagellar filaments from the archaea Halobacterium salinarium S-2 and Halobacterium lacunarium S-14. We present a molecular dynamics study of the surface filaments of the long archaeal flagella from the species Halobacterium salinarium S-2 and Halobacterium lacunarium S-14. The aim of this work was to understand the atomic details of this peculiar type of structure and compare them with the crystallized surface filament from Halobacterium cutirubrum strain SP-1. The major findings of this study are: i) both systems present a total filament length of approximately 120 nm, with a very similar structural architecture, in spite of their different origin; ii) the N-terminal part of the filament remains oriented in approximately the same direction in H. salinarium

It was an outdated build with last-generation hardware, and it was clear that it wasn't even going to be supported for much longer." Oyama was determined to make Serverless a reality on Kubernetes, so they built a new version of their tool on top of ContainerRegistry, which has native Kubernetes support. That meant Oyama's team could use AWS serverless with all its existing Kubernetes clusters. "Before we could take advantage of serverless, we would have to spin up a Kubernetes cluster on top of some other infrastructure like AWS Fargate, AWS ECS, or EC2," Oyama said. "With ContainerRegistry, you can just run a local serverless worker on top of your existing Kubernetes cluster and use all the existing workflows and tools." ClientPlus for Serverless Cloud-native applications are becoming more common. "We're using serverless more frequently, and we're also seeing serverless take off in our 1cb139a0ed
