Q: How to find all pairs of dates between two dates for a given ID in MySQL? I have a database in which each row is assigned an ID. Each ID corresponds to an event. And each event may have multiple "starts" and multiple "ends" (e.g. if an event runs for two days, it could have multiple rows). So essentially, I'm given an ID and I want to return all other IDs that have a start and end date within a given range (by ID). I've been using a self-join but haven't been getting any results. My table looks like this: I want to return one set of values for each ID, so I only need one row per ID. Expected output: ID START END 1 2013-01-01 00:00:00 2013-01-01 00:00:00 1 2013-01-02 00:00:00 2013-01-02 00:00:00 2 2013-01-01 00:00:00 2013-01-02 00:00:00 A: Try this: select a.id, a.start, a.end, b.start, b.end from yourtable a left join yourtable b on (a.id=b.id and b.start>a.start and b.end

I can't believe I'm having an interview (well I can – it's still unwatchable). What game do you play the most? I still play Shining Wind2 even though I don't have time to play it, and I'm almost out of time on Renowed Heroes Online. I still play Black Hole though, and I've just finished Renowed Heroes Online's chapter. "We've begun working on the patch up until the launch because there's a lot of changes for each genre. Since we're starting the campaign this season, there's about four or five months until we launch on all platforms. This time has given us the chance to mature and delve deeper into each genre, and a lot more feedback coming from each gamer has helped us make this game more suitable to each genre." (From Nexon's Press Conference) Can you tell me about the CG-look for character portraits and the number of available portraits in the game? "Graphics has come a step beyond the graphics, essentially creating a game that is totally integrated into their appearance. That has the ability to not only look at Rowling has warned Harry Potter fans not to believe everything they read in the new Netflix series. In an interview with The Sun, Rowling revealed that when she was told that the new series from DC Entertainment was getting an extension, she was asked to read the script. "When Netflix contacted me about a second season of the new series, I was told to read the script. I knew what I was going to say before it was in black and white," Rowling said. "I was told that the characters would all come back and it would be canon." So far, the script has not yet been filmed, leaving only a few days before production begins in July. "I do not know if it will be filmed. It is so early on," Rowling said. "There are still a few details that they are working on. Will I like it? Who knows? But if there is a screenplay, that means it won't be removed from canon." She added that it is unlikely the story would ever be changed from the books, since it is original content. "There is no reason to change or update it," she said. "It's probably now beyond my control. But I can enjoy what happens while it's being written." Rowling said it was time for her to step back from the Harry Potter franchise. "For me, it's the end of the contract, the end of the final book," Rowling said. "I'm also thinking about the series as a whole. It's been a journey to explore some of the big mysteries, the magic world. I feel it was time to take a break and not see it unfold through the eyes of a first-time author."
