I grew up with The Pacific, and Rambo. Those movies got me reading more. After that, I read hard science fiction. After that, again, I read other things... but to say that shows like 24 aren't science fiction seems absurd because science fiction is a genre of literature. It's part of the culture, it's like DAWN of Thunderbirds, or Teen Wolf. As for others, I'm a fan of Battlestar Galactica, Falling Skies, Doctor Who, Ghostbusters, etc. Take it on its word, I don't actually watch that much tv. I have little interest in TV sci-fi. I suspect that is why it is always on here and hardly ever commented on. Not that I dislike it, it's just rare to find people who actually comment on that genre. When I do find people who comment regularly on sci-fi they tend to be older and I have no respect for people over 30 (yeah, yeah, like a 1950s America, ha ha). But other than that, I

It's not explicit, but it's common knowledge that young love is the most common theme (esp. for female characters) of Marvel and DC superhero movies. With this basis and the general ignorance towards astrophysics in the media, science fiction has been regarded as a genre that mostly helps one to understand how things could work in real life.
