Q: matplotlib histogram with predefined bin width? I want to plot some data as a histogram with matplotlib. The bin width is defined as (y-y0)/deltay. However, I can't seem to find a function to automatically calculate such a value for me. dt is the datasize of the bins from the beginning to the end of the bin in the data sample. Is there a way to calculate such a value? Or is there a function to find the smallest dt that will result in one bin that contains all data points? Thanks A: There's no general way to do it, but you can do it for a given set of data: # starting point: (y0,deltay) # v import numpy as np import matplotlib.pyplot as plt # your data a,b,c = [1,1.6,1.9] y0 = 1.1 deltay = 0.1 # compute histogram H = np.histogram(a, bins=5, density=True) # compute limits of histogram xmin,xmax = H.min(),H.max() ymin,ymax = H.min(),H.max() # compute the smallest deltaY to ensure that a bin contains all data points N = (ymax-ymin)/deltay + 1 # find the smallest N to make a bin contain all data points deltaY = N*deltay # compute deltay for a given ylim deltaY = (ymax-ymin)/N # plot the histogram plt.hist(a,bins=5,density=True, normed=True) plt.xlim(xmin,xmax) plt.ylim(ymin,ymax) plt.show() Q: How can I handle the startup of a service without creating a shutdown? I have a service that binds to the Windows event log; it listens on the event ID 4, which when raised, means the service is starting up

Development of a questionnaire to assess barriers to HIV postexposure prophylaxis use. To develop a questionnaire to evaluate barriers to HIV postexposure prophylaxis (PEP) use that uses a mixed-methods approach. Methods of mixed-methods research are used to develop a questionnaire with the following components: literature review, qualitative interviews with HIV PEP users, and cognitive interviews with HIV PEP users. Methodological quality of the mixed-methods research was assessed using the Mixed Methods Appraisal Tool (MMAT) for the complete questionnaire. Pretesting

was conducted in-person, via telephone and email. The questionnaire was revised based on pretest feedback and the MMAT. The complete questionnaire was administered to HIV PEP users. The MMAT showed five eligible MMAT items, indicating the mixed-methods research was of high methodological quality. Pretesting helped identify issues related to the items. After revision, the questionnaire was administered to a convenience sample of HIV PEP users, which resulted in good response rates to all items (≥90%). Exploratory factor analysis showed items belonging to the same factor. The barriers (and enablers) to HIV PEP use were: perceived risk of transmission, duration of time to seek HIV PEP, previous HIV knowledge, provider availability/quality, family support, and stigma. This study provides a validated questionnaire with items that can be used in future studies aimed at understanding barriers to HIV PEP use, and potential intervention development.1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a semiconductor device and a method for producing the same, in particular, to a semiconductor device which is improved in reliability and a method for producing the same. 2. Description of the Background Art In an analog integrated circuit, a capacitor is used in order to function as a stray capacitor and a capacity. The semiconductor devices used for forming capacitors are mainly formed using an oxide film or a nitride film as a dielectric film. Especially, a metal-insulator-semiconductor (MIS) capacitor using a polycrystalline silicon film as a first electrode is frequently employed as an element of a large capacity memory such as a DRAM. As the insulating film for forming MIS capacitors, an oxide film is generally used. On the other hand, it is known that when the polycrystalline silicon film having high electrical conductivity is used as a first electrode, a capacity is decreased by increasing the capacitor
