Organization of the genome organization and expression of mouse arylsulfatase A. The complete cDNA sequence of the arylsulfatase A gene was determined from a 12-kb cDNA clone containing 12 exons. The genes for the mouse arylsulfatase A and B are found on chromosome 9 (9A1-9A1.3) and on chromosome 8 (8D1-8D1.3), respectively, and the homologous genes are also found on human chromosome 21. The mouse arylsulfatase B gene is found on chromosome 8 in the same region as the genes for C3 and P-component, as is the human homolog. The mouse arylsulfatase A gene is similar to the gene for the human or rat arylsulfatase. Exons 1-3 are identical in the mouse, human, and rat genes, as well as exon 3 in the mouse arylsulfatase B gene. The protein encoded by exon 3 of the gene has been implicated in the formation of the active site of the enzymes. The mouse arylsulfatase A gene has been mapped to the region of mouse chromosome 9 that is syntenic with human chromosome 21. The 5' flanking region of the mouse arylsulfatase A gene was found to contain a TATA box, CAAT boxes, CACCC box, Sp1 site, Oct-1 site, and AP-1 site. For the last five years, the world has witnessed death camps being set up in the Central African Republic (CAR) – and in Geneva, there is virtually no interest in the events, according to Wilfried Martens, the president of the European Parliament. "There is no political will to act and to protect refugees there," said Martens, who has visited the country and traveled to all the camps. "Everyone wants to wash their hands of it. The EU has basically lost control." Martens' words illustrate the degree to which the EU's refugee and asylum policies have been in disarray for the last three years. But the crisis is not only with the EU – when asked last week about the crisis in CAR, the US Department of State cautioned that it "is not a situation which we believe is confined to CAR." And the UN Secretary General has warned of a "bloodbath" in

DRC's Ambrose set to stop arch-rival France in Rio DRC's Olympic women's 100m hurdles champion Shelly-Ann Fraser-Pryce has won silver in the 400m, but the greatest triumph of her career could be in Rio de Janeiro. FRANCE'S arch-rival France will enjoy home advantage as they take on host country Brazil for the women's 100m final in Rio de Janeiro on Sunday. Outstanding performances from Daniele Markovič of the Czech Republic and Dafne Schippers from the Netherlands gave their teams a small margin over USA in the overall medal standings, while Canada are now desperate to make it three from three. The Netherlands, it must be said, had once been out of this contest, but with a brilliant Nijem performance at the British trials, they are back and have levelled up with Russia on the scoreboard. It is that vicious permutation in women's athletics that is one of the grand features of the Games. Russia should be the favourites, but in a welter of emerging talent and left-field tactics, anything can happen. As the new season approaches, here is a full list of runners from the four Olympic semi-final heats on Friday to the four men's and eight women's finals in Rio. Men's 100m DRC (2) beat USA (1) by 0.21 seconds in a heat that included four of the world's top eight performers. The DRC usually seem to have an army of runners who can run faster than their opponents, and Mlambo is a member of that team. They took the lead from the USA with 2.1 seconds to run on, but the American's lead runner Conathan 'Con' Reilly was the only one who really got going, beating them over the last six yards. The DRC began their slow loss of ground and were beaten out by the USA. The race was the first under 10.00 seconds since 1992. Eilidh Jarnoh was second in 10.12, with Andreea Iridon of Romania third in 10.14. ENG+GB (6) led from the start with Eilidh Jarnoh and Lea Shone leading the way for the UK and

Ireland. Iridiaen was third in 10.12 and the fastest of
